THE YOUNG REBEL.

A TALE OF THE CAROLINAS.

BY J. M. SAUNDERS.

In a small farm-house, towards the close of the year 1780, sat an old man, his wife and only son. The face of the father appeared troubled; at times he looked thoughtful on the floor, and then he would gaze long and wistfully at his son, a fine, manly youth of twenty. At length he said:—

"David, this is disastrous news from Camden. God knows what will become of the country now! I wish this old wound I got in the French war had not lamed me—but for it, I should be now shouldering my musket and marching to defend my country."

Both the wife and son looked up at these words. The old lady ceased knitting and gazed enquiringly at her boy, and it was evident from the expression of her face, that patriotism and motherly affection were at variance in her bosom.—The son, however, after encountering his father's eye for a moment, turned confusedly away. The old man's brow darkened, and he said warmly—

"David, David, why do you linger about the village when your country needs your service so much? why, son; I am ashamed of you! Twice before this I have spoken to you on this subject, but you appear to have no spirit! What? will you see us trampled upon by the brutal mercenaries of Britain, and still lie here supinely? For shame, David, for shame! I will not call you my son. Long since you ought to have been in the army."

"Joshua, Joshua," interposed the old mother, "David is but a youth, then do not speak to him so harshly. He cannot feel what you feel, who have fought so often against your country's enemies—Joshua he is but a boy."

"A boy, indeed, Deborah! such boys as David have already gained imperishable laurels since the war commenced. I could name a host of them! Why, were it not for the boys of this land, where would be our army, which I dare say, is one quarter composed of David's age." The old man was excited, and it was the first unkind word that he had ever spoken to his boy.

David arose and left the house. He walked some distance apparently in deep thought.

"What will not woman do?" he at last muttered; "here I have been lingering about the village when I should have been off long ago. And for what?—why to meet a pretty girl, and to listen to her musical voice; but now I will be myself again! What did he call me? was it not a COWARD? Now, by heavens, I will learn him that he has a son who possesses the spirit of his father. Away, then with love, for I feel that I am called upon to act, and no longer to dream! Ere a fortnight my father shall hear from me, or else I lose my life in striving for it." And with this resolution, he turned about and retraced his steps.

When he had reached home, he sought the stables, saddling his horse and mounting him, struck into a gallop, which he continued for several miles. At length he stopped and looked at the windows of a farm house, half hid between the clustering trees. This was the residence of Mary Bunker, the mistress of his heart; the light showed that the family had not retired, and he resolved to pay her a visit before his departure.

She was alone when he entered, and a few words acquainted her with his determination. She burst into tears.

"No, Mary," he said, "you must not unman me. At first I resolved to leave you without a farewell, for I knew how much you dreaded my taking an active part in this struggle. But I could not be so cruel as to desert you without a word."

"I will compose myself," said the girl, with an effort to smile. "I know I have done wrong to persuade you to stay; but you cannot imagine the anxiety I suffer on account of my brothers, and I could not bear to have you encounter their danger. But since the dreadful defeat at Camden, I feel that every man is wanted by our country. Go, then, dearest, may God be with you. My prayers shall be with you night and day."

David pressed the now weeping girl to his bosom, snatched a hasty kiss at the sound of approaching footsteps, wrung her hand and was gone.

The next day he left the neighborhood of his father's house, armed with a musket and mounted on a sturdy horse. His destination was the American camp, then far to the northward; but as the intervening country was filled with the enemy, he knew there would be considerable address required to effect his purpose. Before his departure he saw a few of his old playmates, who promised to follow him as soon as possible.

Night found him near a lonely farm house to which he proceeded boldly in pursuit of a lodging. At first the occupant received him coldly, but a chance expression convinced David that his host was a tory—he affected the same political creed, and was immediately warmly welcomed. The royalist produced his cider after supper, and insisted that David should join him in his potations. This the young man did, taking care however, not to indulge too freely, while the farmer, overjoyed to find what he supposed a new recruit for his party, drank without stint, and became more and more communicative. To his horror, David soon learned that a party of loyalists, led by a Maj. Wilson, celebrated for his toryism and ruthlessness, were to start early on the ensuing day on an expedition to seize and hang the two Bunkers, who had made themselves particularly obnoxious to the royalist leaders. David knew enough of partizan warfare to be assured that no mercy would be shown his friends; he also knew enough of the character of the Major, to suspect that some strong personal motive had led to the planning of so distant an expedition, when there were others as inviting near home. He accordingly set himself to discover the truth from his half inebriated companion. Nor was it long before success crowned his adroit cross examination.

"Why you see," said the host, "I believe there's a little revenge for a slight received from these fellow's sister, mixed up with the Major's desire to catch the Bunkers. The girl is very pretty, they say, and the Major, when he was down there on a visit last year before the war, wanted to marry her; but she would have nothing to say to him. Ever since he has vowed to make her rue the day. You may depend on it he will have her on his own terms now; thank Heaven! there's no law any longer to prevent an honest loyalist from doing as he pleases to these rascally rebels. But yonder is the Major now," suddenly said his host, starting up; "I will introduce you to him at once—a merry fellow you will find him.—Lord love you, he's as brave as a lion."

David, though horrified at the diabolical plot he had heard, saw the necessity of dissembling in order to learn further of the tories plans, and find means if possible, to circumvent them. He arose, therefore, and shook the Major's hand warmly; he pledged him immediately in a brimmer; and soon contrived to make the loyalist believe that he was anxious to join a troop and take part against the rebels. This induced the Major to be unusually civil, for he wished to secure so athletic a recruit himself. It was not long before a bargain had been concluded between the two. David refused, however, to sign the agreement that night; he pretended that several others of his friends were disaffected and desirous of joining the loyalists; and his object, he said, was to secure a commission for himself by inducing them to join. The tempting bait took; the Major promised him a commission in his troops in case of success; and David signified his intention of setting forth after he had taken a few hours' rest, in order to lose no time in gathering his recruits.

The dread of discovery had been constantly before our hero during the management of his negociation, for the reason that he was well known to many of the Major's troop, and if any of them had come, his feigned name would not have protected him from detection. He wished to get on that night, as he had proposed but to this neither his host or the Major would hear, and he was forced to remain till morning. What was his anguish on rising, to learn that the Major had been gone some hours, and was already on his way to Bunkers, with his troops.—Dissembling his anxiety, David partook of a hasty breakfast and mounting his horse, rode slowly away. But when out of sight of the house, he struck into a fleace gallop, which he continued until he came in sight of a cross road, where was a tavern. Here he stopped, and learning that the loyalists had taken the high road, he turned aside into a narrow and more circuitons one.

"It is my only chance to avoid them," he said, again dashing into a gallop.—Pray God I may reach the settlement in time to collect a few of our lads and march to the Bunkers. There is no other hope now left.

Night had fallen, as they had expected before the tories were able to reach the vicinity of the house they were in search of. At length, however, after a silent march through the woods, it broke upon their view. A light was burning in one of the windows, and when they arrived close to the premises the lively notes of a violin reached their ears, proving that the brothers were not aware of their presence but enjoyed themselves in imagined security.

"Now, men,' whispered the leader of the tories, 'when I give the word, fire a volley at the house by way of introducing ourselves, we will then surround the place and enter it.'

At that instant the deep bay of a dog rang in their ears, and a large mastiff sprang from under the house, and rushed at the Major.

'Fire!' he cried.

Twenty guns broke upont he stillness of the night—the dog fell dead—every pane in the front of the house was shivered, and the tories yelled like savages.—In an instant the lights iu the house were extinguished—the violin as quickly ceased, and a noise was heard at the door.—The tories made a rush at it. But it was already barred, and being made of stout oak plank, resisted their efforts.—A rifle cracked at one of the upper windows, and one of the tories fell desperately wounded. Another report succeeded and another fell, and Major Wilson was awore that both Bunkers were at home and wide awake. A shed turned the rain from the front of the house, and underneath this the tories shielded themselves from the fire of the Bunkers, and went to work at the door. Suspecting such resistance—perhaps from his knowledge of their character—one of the men had brought an axe, with which he commenced hewing at the door, and soon cut it to pieces. Here a desperate battle ensued. The two brothers were powerful men, and courageous as they were strong and now with clubbed rifles they disputed the entrance of the whole tory force The door being small, they stood their ground for half an hour, felling during that time some of those who had the temerity to enter first, but finally they overcame them and they were flung upon the floor bound. The tories, inflamed to madness at the great resistance which had been made, and at their own losses, now seized the mother and sister, and made preperations to hang the brothers before their eyes. The ropes were already around the necks of the victims, when the Major addressed his men:

'Now, friends, as soon as these villains are dead, we will set fire to the house—the old woman, there,' he said with a brutal laugh, may be left inside—but the young one I reserve for myself.'

'Hist! cried one of the men in a loud voice. The Major ceased, and they heard a voice outside the house. Although the words were spoken low, the listners distinctly heard, 'when I say fire, give it to them.'

A man with blanched cheeks now rushed among them exclaiming

'The yard is full of men!'

'Fire,' cried a deep voice from the yard—a general volley succeeded, and so well had the aim been directed in the door, that several tories fell, either dead or desperately wounded. In turn the tories retreated up stairs; when David, our hero rushed in the room which they had just left, and cut the cords which bound the two Bunkers and their sister and mother.

'May God Almighly bless you for this,' cried one of the Bunkers.

The two men sprang up, seized their rifles which had been left in the room. and prepared to retaliate the treatment they had just received.

Long and desperate was the battle.—The tories fought for life; the whigs for revenge. But at length the latter triumphed though not until their enemies had been almost exterminated. The Major fell by the arm of our hero, who sought him out in the hottest of the fight, and engaged him single-handed.

No language of ours can express the emotions of our hero as he pressed his betrothed bride to his bosom; and his heart went up in thankfulness to Heaven for his timely arrival, when he thought that a delay of half an hour longer would have consigned her to a fate worse than death. The gratitude of her brothers was expressed in many words, but her's was silent and tearful yet, oh! how much more gratifying.

'I almost called you a coward, son David,' said his father to him, when they met, 'but you are a chip out of the old block. and I did you wrong. Deborah he is a boy to be proud of—is he not? You may founder one of my horses every day that you do such a deed—it beat all I ever saw in the old French war.'

David's gallantry on this occasion drew around him in a few days a score of hardy young fellows, who fought with him to the close of the war, when he returned and was happily married to the heroine of our story.

HOTEL FOR INVALIDS

AT PITTSBURGH.

Drs. Speer and Kuhn.

THE object of this establishment is to supply a want greatly felt by respectable travellers on our western highways—by residents. without family, taken sick—and by patients from the surrounding towns and country who resort to this place for relief from surgical and other diseases. Such have often suffered from the want of the various comforts and attentions so necessary and agreeable to the sick, and from careless and unfaithful nurses; and been subjected to heavy and unreasonable charges.

Invalids will here be provided with constant, faithful and comfortable attendance, snd at a rate much below the usual charges.

While the care of both physicians will be extended to every variety of disease, it is intended by Dr. Speer, to give special attention to

ALL SURGICAL DISEASES,

PARTICULARLY TO

DISEASES OF THE EYE.

To these branches of his profession he has given a large share of his attention for the last twenty-five years, and he will continue to devote to them the experience acquired by a constant practice during that time.

The Hotel for Invalids is not an experiment. Its establishment is suggested not only as necessary to supply an evident want in this city, in the entire absence of any special provision for the sick, but is warranted also by the success of similar institutions at Cincinnati and New Orleans—the former under the care of Drs. Taliaferro, Marshall and Strader—the latter under that of Dr. Stone.

The building selected for the purpose is situated at the corner of Federal and Robinson streets, in Allegheny city, adjoining the city of Pittsburgh. It is commodious and roomy, and furnished with all accommodations necessary for the sick.

Applications for admission to be made to the subscribers, at their office on Penn street, Pittsburgh, or at the establishment.

☞No contagious diseases will be admitted. J. R. SPEER, M. D.

J. S. KUHN, M. D.

February 25, 1845.

George L. Gordon,

CHAIR-MAKER;

HAVING purchased from Mr Daniel Pile, his interest in the establishment heretofore carried on under the firm of Gordon & Pile, respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he continues to carry on the

Chair-Making Business,

in all its branches, at the old stand, opposite Mr Kurtz's Drug store in the borough of Somerset, where he will at all times keep on hand or make to order and Boston rocking chairs; all of which he will sell very cheap for cash, or exchange for approved country produce at market prices;

SETTEES; COMMON FANCY AND GRECIAN CHAIRS,

His work will be done in a neat and fashionable style and substantial manner; and he invites the public to give him a call before purchasing elsewhere.

N B A good journeyman to the above business, who can paint and finish, is wanted immediately, and to whom constant employment and liberal wages will be given.

CELEBRATED

LIVER PILL.

For the cure of Hepatites or Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and Sick Head-Ache.

THIS remedy having been for several years employed by the proprietor in his practice, on a very large scale in Monongalia, Preston, Harrison and Randolph counties, in Virginia, besides several other places, and having been attended with the most happy effects, he has been from time to time solicited to adopt such a course as would give it a more extensive circulation, with a view to lessen the amount of human suffering. Aware of the fact that many useless nostrums have been palmed upon the public, he hesitated for several years until thoroughly convinced that the above medicine, if properly used, would not fail to effect cures in a great many instances, and even to alleviate those cases which are quite incurable.

Symptoms of a diseased Liver.—Pain in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increased on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the right arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels, in general, are costive. sometimes altering with lax. the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness end debilty; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the scin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body after death has shown the liver to have been extensively deranged.

CERTIFICATES.

This is to certify, that having been associated with Dr. M'Lane in the practice of medicine for nearly two and a half years, I have had many opportunities of witnessing the good effects of his Liver Pills, and I believe they have cured and relieved a much larger proportion of the diseases of the liver, than I have known cured and relieved by any other course of treatment.

Patent Vermifuge.

DR. M'LANE'S AMERICAN WORM SPECIFIC

Promptly expels Worms to an almost incredible number!

TO substantiate the above fact many hundreds of testimonials could be adduced, out of which the following are selected, from individuals of standing and veracity. Indeed, it is confidently affirmed that each new trial of the powers of this remedy will have an additional tendency to widen and confirm its fame, and that if it were universally known and diffused over the United States, it would not save less than many hundreds, if not thousands of lives annually.

CERTIFICATES.

I do certify that a vial of Dr. M'Lane's American Worm Specific expelled five hundred and two whole worms and pieces that would have made sixty more, from a boy of John Lewelling, which, if laid in a straight line, would have most probably measured the enormous length of one hundrer yards. JOSIAH JACKSON, owner of Wate. Forge, and other works, Monongalia county, Va.

This is to certify that I purchased from Holmes & Kidd a vial of Dr. M'Lane's American Worm Specific, and gave two doses to a boy of mine about three years years of age. He passed fully half a pint of worms. The quantity was so large I was really alarmed, and called in several of my neighbors to see them. Had this story been related to me, I could not have credited it, without being an eye-witness to the same. My child's health improved much after.

SAM'L MORRISON,

Merchant Tailor, Wood st, Pittsburgh.

Some two months ago I purchased a vial of Dr M'Lanes American Worm Specific. I gave a boy of mine most of a vial; he passed forty very large worms. From that time his health improved very much. I had tried two other Vermifuges to no purpose. I believe Dr, M'Lane's the best article before the public. D. CALHOUN,

Mifflin township, Allegheny county.

HEAR MEDICAL TESTIMONY.

From a regular Physician, Dr G S Smith, Sunfish, Ohio.

Mr. J. Kidd—Dear Sir—I have used in my practice Dr. M'Lane's American Worm Specific, nd have often witnessed its efficacy in expelling worms from the system. A patient of mine, a short time ago, gave a vial of the Worm Specific to a child; in a short time upwards of sixty-five worms were expelled.
